

INITIATIVE USE

September 2010

A total of 2,314 state-level initiatives have been on the ballot since the first ones went before the voters in Oregon in 1904, and 942 (41 percent) have been approved.

The modern initiative movement began in the late 1970s with California's tax-cutting Proposition 13. Initiative use exploded in the following decades, reaching a peak of 377 in the 1990s, 177 of which were approved. The first decade of the new century saw a total of 374 initiatives, just shy of the historical record, with 158 passing.

Twenty-three states have had at least one initiative during the period 1904-2009. Oregon continues to be the overall leader, with 351 initiatives. California is second with 329. Colorado (209), North Dakota (178), and Arizona (171) round out the top five.

This report summarizes state-level initiative activity during the period 1904-2009. The figures show the total number of initiatives, and (shaded) the number that were approved. A complete year-by-year count is on the second page.
