Election Results 2012: Breakthrough Wins for Marijuana and Same-Sex Marriage

Voters decided 174 ballot propositions across 38 states on November 6, delivering breakthrough victories for advocates of marijuana legalization and same-sex marriage. Based on current returns, 112 measures have been approved, 60 have failed, and 2 are too close to call. The 65% approval rate is up from 59% in 2010 and 2008. Noteworthy outcomes include approval of initiatives legalizing possession and use of marijuana in Colorado and Washington, voter approval of same-sex marriage in Maine, Maryland, and Washington, and rejection of a marriage ban in Minnesota.

Overall Activity in Perspective

Voters decided 174 propositions in November (two other propositions were on the ballot in Arkansas, but their votes will not be counted by court order) and 12 propositions in elections earlier in the year. The 174 propositions in November is up from 159 in 2010, and 153 in 2008, and the highest total since 204 measures appeared in November 2006. The 186 propositions for the year is up from 183 in 2010, up from 174 in 2008, and down from 225 in 2006.

In a typical year, the most visible and controversial propositions are initiatives and referendums, issues that are placed on the ballot by citizen petition. For 2012, the number of initiatives is 48, up from 46 in 2010 but down from 68 in 2009. The approval rate for initiatives (counting those that have been decided) this year is 41%, exactly the historical average. For more information on initiative trends, see IRI Report on Initiative Use (1904-2011). For additional information on ballot measures see ballotpedia.org.

Noteworthy Issues

Colorado and Washington Legalize Marijuana
Marijuana may be the biggest ballot proposition story of the year. For the first time ever, two states approved propositions that legalize possession and use of marijuana. Colorado’s Amendment 64 was approved 55-45 and Washington’s I-502 was approved 55-45. A third legalization initiative, Oregon’s Measure 80, was rejected 45-55. The approval of these initiatives represents a significant breakthrough in a decades-long campaign by legalization advocates, and is the first evidence at the ballot box that public opinion is changing on this issue. In 2008, Massachusetts voters approved Question 2 that decriminalized small amounts of the drug, making possession of less than one ounce subject only to a $100 fine. In 2010, California voters narrowly rejected (47-53) Proposition 19 that would have legalized personal use. Legalization initiatives in the more distant past had failed by large margins. Legalization advocates hope that the experience of Colorado and Washington will demonstrate that decriminalization will not give rise to greater crime and addiction, and encourage other states to follow suit. The wild card in all of this is the position that will be take by federal authorities because federal law prohibits possession of marijuana.

Legalization advocates also scored victories in Massachusetts (Question 3) and Montana (IR-124) where voters approved laws enabling medical use of marijuana. Before election day, 17 states permitted medical marijuana. In a setback to marijuana advocates, Arkansas voters were narrowly rejecting (49-51) Issue 3 that would have allowed medical use of marijuana. Arkansas would have been the first Southern state to permit medical marijuana if Issue 3 had passed.

Voters Approve Same-Sex Marriage for the First Time
Another big story from the election concerns same-sex marriage, as gay marriage advocates achieved their first victory at the polls after a long run of defeats across the country. Opinion surveys suggest that public opinion has shifted dramatically in support of gay marriage over the last decade, yet so far all state-level victories for same-sex marriage have come from courts or legislatures. Voters have chosen to ban gay marriage in 30 of 31 proposition elections before this year (see IRI Report BW 2012-1 on same-sex marriage for more information.) On November 6, Maine voters approved Question 1 by a 53-47 margin and Maryland voters approved Question 6 by a 52-48 margin, in both cases approving laws passed by their legislatures allowing same-sex marriage. Washington voters also appear to have affirmed a same-sex marriage law by a current margin of 52-48, with 69% of votes counted. With these outcomes, voters for the first time have directly sanctioned same-sex marriage; same-sex marriage proponents hope that these are the breakthrough victories that trigger a wave of legalization across the country.

Almost All Bond Issues Pass
Many states require voter approval before state bonds can be issued. Since the onset of the financial crisis and recession, legislators have been cautious about proposing new bond issues. In 2010, voters approved only $2 billion in new bonds compared to $13 billion in 2008. This year, legislatures in seven states placed 16 bond proposals before the voters, with a total authorization to borrow of $3.2 billion. The largest proposal, $1.3 billion for roads and highways, came from the relatively small state of Arkansas. The measure included a 0.5% sales tax increases to fund repayment of debt. Other large proposals were New Jersey’s measure to borrow $750 million for colleges and Alaska’s Bonding Proposition A to borrow $453 million for transportation projects. On November 6, voters approved 15 of 16 bond proposals, with only Maine’s Question 2 going down to defeat.

Oklahoma Approves Civil Rights Measure
Oklahoma voters approved State Question 759 by a 59-41 margin, prohibiting discrimination or preferable treatment based on race, sex, ethnicity, and national origin. The measure undercuts some affirmative action programs in the state. Similar measures seeking a “color blind” approach to race have passed in Arizona, California, Michigan, Nebraska, and Washington.

California Keeps the Death Penalty
California voters declined to abolish capital punishment in the state, rejecting Proposition 34 by a 47-53 vote. The initiative statute would have been retroactive, converting all existing death row sentences to life imprisonment without the possibility of parole. Proponents argued that taxpayers would save up to $100 million per year by converting death row inmates to lifetime terms. California is one of 33 states that currently permit capital punishment.

Mixed Messages on Illegal Immigrants.
Voters sent mixed messages about how to address the situation of illegal immigrants. In 2011, Maryland’s legislature passed SB 167 that allowed illegal immigrants to pay in-state tuition at state universities, if they attended high school in the state and their parents paid taxes. On November 6, the state’s voters resoundingly approved (58-42), Question 4, the so-called Dream Act Referendum, that gave voters the option to approve or repeal SB 167. By an even larger margin (80-20), Montana voters approved LR-121 that denies state services to illegal immigrants. The law requires individuals who apply for state services to prove proof of citizenship. It remains to be seen whether LR-121 can withstand anticipated court challenges.

Redistricting
Election reformers have long been concerned with the practice in most states of legislators drawing the lines for their own electoral districts, claiming this leads to “politicians choosing their voters” ra-
Another than voters choosing their representatives. Ohio voters rejected by a 36-64 margin Issue 2, an initiated constitutional amendment that would have created a bipartisan commission to draw district lines, comprised of four Democrats, four Republicans, and four members from neither party. The initiative was sponsored by Democratic groups frustrated with the Republican-controlled apportionment plan adopted in 2011. Maryland voters rejected Issue 5 by a 64-36 margin that proposed to repeal the state’s new congressional district lines.

Suicide
Massachusetts’ “Death with Dignity” Question 2, an initiative statute that would have allowed a terminally ill person to be given a lethal injection was rejected in close election 51-49. Five states have held votes on physician-assisted suicide, beginning with Washington in 1991. Washington voters rejected a proposal in 1991 but approved a similar measure in 2008. Oregon voters also legalized this form of suicide in 1994. Similar proposals were rejected by California and Michigan voters in the 1990s.

Mixed Results for Unions
The results were mixed for unions. They received good news in California where voters decisively rejected Proposition 32 by a 44-56 margin. The initiative would have prohibited union dues from being used for political purposes without explicit authorization of members, prohibited union and corporate contributions to campaigns, and prohibited government contractors from contributing to campaigns. Voters rejected similar measures in 1998 and 2005 by small margins. The news was less positive for unions in Michigan, where voters rejected Proposal 12-2 by a 42-58 margin; the proposition would have placed a right to collective bargaining in the state constitution. Alabama voters approved Amendment 7 67-33 that requires secret ballots in union elections.

First time voters have approved same-sex marriage, in Maine, Maryland, and Washington
